

Abstract : The experience of working through anger in Gestalt therapy is explored using a qualitative research methodology . The co-researcher's felt experience , the elements of the therapy which enabled the work to happen and subsequent developments to come from the work are all explored . The therapeutic relationship emerges in the findings as one of the most important foundations for anger work .