

Abstract

This is a qualitative study based on a phenomenological exploration of the relevance of neuroscience to Gestalt psychotherapy. Eight participants contributed to the research and the data was generated through the use of semi-structured interviews. The key findings from this research data and the literature are presented and discussed, along with implications for Gestalt psychotherapy practice.