

Abstract

In this qualitative research study a Heuristic methodology is used to examine how Gestalt psychotherapy training influences the spiritual development of five black Afro Caribbean women trainees. This is accomplished through an analysis of literature and a series of conversational type interviews. The themes examined include religion and spirituality, Alienation and Awakening as associated with women's spiritual development models. The findings and implications for Gestalt Psychotherapy training are presented.