

Abstract

In my dissertation I explore attunement, with particular reference to how it can be reparative in the therapeutic relationship.

My exploration of attunement includes historical, theoretical and personal aspects, and links to, and experiences from my ongoing clinical practice with my case study client.

I share my findings, learning and reflections on my professional and personal journey as a trainee Humanistic Integrative therapist.