

Abstract

In this dissertation the subject of shame is considered looking at the effects it may have on the therapist and client in a Humanistic and Integrative therapeutic relationship is researched. The literature on how shame affects impacts on human development and influences human relationship are reviewed. A case is provided to share my experience of working with shame in clinical practice.

(Word count 63)