

Abstract

Using a case study methodology this dissertation explores the possibilities of using and withholding touch and its impact within a therapeutic setting. The dissertation is in three main parts. My rationale will explain how I work as a humanistic integrative therapist. Next my literature review will explore my findings of the literature of touch in psychotherapy. To end this dissertation I will explore my clinical practice and demonstrate my ethical dilemma of touch.