

Abstract

This piece of work is an exploration of how affect dysregulation, as a consequence of relational trauma, might potentially be linked to Medically Unexplained Symptoms (MUS).

I will discuss what instigated my interest in this subject, outline my rationale for practice, review relevant literature pertaining to both topics, and demonstrate my understanding by application of theory to practice in my case study.